

The following sentences are both true. Before there was a universe there was nothing. Before there was a universe there was everything. Now, I know that if you have nothing and you are holding that nothing in your hand, you are holding all you have which would mean you are holding everything, but that's not what I mean by "there was everything". I mean, before the universe existed, everything and anything that will exist in it already exists but there is nothing. To try and understand this, think of the whole universe, at it's smallest scale, being made up of a series of identical spheres, stacked, touching each other on all sides and forming an infinite line in any direction. There are endless spheres in any direction you look. Now, instead of thinking of them as individual spheres, think of each sphere as actually being one black sphere and one white sphere existing in the same spot, overlapping each other and producing what looks like a grey sphere at each location. Next, because the endless rows of white and black spheres are all overlapping they all look grey so if you try to look at any sphere in any direction, the background will be filled with the other spheres which have the exact same shade of medium grey, making each grey sphere disappear into a grey background so they cancel each other out and you can't see the black or the white spheres, they no longer exist. All of the white and black spheres exist, Everything is there, all of it, but you see nothing. You would say nothing exists in any direction you look. The universe isn't really black and white spheres creating a grey fog. It's an equal number of pairs of positive and negative energy spheres, creating a neutral energy fog but I'm using the colored spheres in order to try and help visualize a universe that is made up of opposites that cancel each other out. Physics tells us that energy equals matter and visa-versa. At this point all matter and anti-matter exist as positive or negative energy. There is an equal amount of positive and negative spheres and being exact opposites they cancel each other out. They exist but they are paired up and cancelling each other out so as to not exist. The universe has everything but has nothing at the same time. All matter and anti-matter exist but as cancelled positive and negative energy. These positive and negative energies are also attracted to their opposites and repelled by their same, which holds them in place in a cancelled state. At this stage the universe is 100% cancelled energy and 0% matter.

So, if all the energy of the universe exists in infinite rows of cancelled spheres, then we have every possible space in the universe filled with every possible negative energy and every possible positive. This means the universe is infinitely dense with every space filled, everywhere. It is as solid as solid literally can be, even though it is solid energy and not solid matter. We have been taught that nothing in the universe can travel faster than the speed of light but that isn't true. Light has a constant speed in a vacuum and slows down when it passes through different materials to the point of being stopped. Sound or shock-waves however, are the opposite, they travel much slower than light but when they pass through different materials they travel faster the more dense the material they travel through. In an infinitely dense material sound and shock-waves would travel infinitely fast. Kind of like dominos stacked up with spaces in between them will fall into each other and travel faster the closer they are until they are touching each other. Once the dominos are all touching each other in a row the last domino moves at the same time as the first in the row when you push on the first one because they are all touching. This is the most important concept to grasp ... Everything exists, therefore every space is filled, leaving no empty spaces between everything and because everything is literally touching it's neighbor, if it moves, everything else moves with it at the same time. Although the spheres are all touching each other in our comparison, these are, in reality, positive or negative energies. They are spheres, each with a positive or negative spherical magnetic-like field. It's their magnetic-like fields that are actually touching each other and it's the same fields that attract or repel them.

In order to visualize how we get something from nothing now, you can think of it like 2 separate universes at this point, one that contains everything and one that contains nothing. both are in fact the same universe, it just depends on the beholder. Anyone or anything made of matter (like us), would see the universe as empty while anyone or anything made of energy would see it as full. While there was no matter or information in our physical universe, the cancelled energy universe had all the information, trapped in a stalemate. This means all the intelligence, all the questions and all the answers were contained in the cancelled energy universe and that combined intelligence would constitute an all knowing, all powerful God. (From here on, anytime I refer to God, I'll use He, which is a male reference, but you feel free to add in your own, She, It, They, whenever you read the word He. I'm not attempting to give God a gender). This God, consisted of energy only and was bound by the laws of math and energy. Opposites attract and the same repel. All things were equal and balance must be maintained. Nothing could be added or taken away without losing the balance and because the universe was infinitely solid and everything in it was touching, there was no time or space as we perceive it, but God was contained in an infinite mathematical labyrinth which had no beginning or end. Here was God, with all the knowledge, power and resources of the universe and the blueprints for the design of anything and everything, staring at an empty canvas of the matter universe and He had only one possible purpose, to create all the things he has the blueprints and resources to make. He is energy, his purpose is to create matter.

If we use our black and white spheres model again, we have infinite black and white spheres overlapping to create grey spheres. This infinite volume of opposites gives us a two symbol matrix for a binary computer code. The black and white spheres can be represented as 0s and 1s. When God created the universe he spoke it into existence using a computer language that started as a simple binary code and grew to be the advanced, original source code of the universe. His first creation using this source code was an end point, which was the only way of creating a beginning point. He couldn't multiply or divide, add or subtract from the equation, so he picked a single grey sphere which is made up of black and white overlapping spheres, or mathematically it is the numbers X and -X in an endless infinite loop of numbers, and he metaphorically, pressed the equals (=) sign on the universal calculator, which solved and created an end to the calculation, and he got the answer:  $X + (-X) = 0$  or black + white = medium grey. The black and white spheres became medium grey and medium grey. They still cancel each other out and the equation remains equal, just now we've changed it from a black and white overlapping to create a grey, to grey and grey overlapping to make grey. Mathematically,  $X$  and  $-X$  have been changed to zero and -zero and a beginning point was created. The moment it was created though, it changed from being  $X$  and  $-X$  (black and white), or opposites, to 0 and -0 (grey and grey) which are the same and they instantly went from attracting to repelling each other. This caused two shock-waves, a positive and a negative. Like the precision breaking of a rack of pool balls, thought and aim were put into their wavelength and direction and these shock-waves or sound-waves, traveled in many directions from this point of origin and because they were travelling in an infinitely dense environment, they traveled at an infinite, almost instant speed to every end of the universe in every direction. Everything everywhere in the universe came to exist as matter (or antimatter) where they are at almost the same time, faster than the blink of an eye. Think of two sound or shock-waves travelling from sphere to sphere, a black and a white or a positive and negative version. When one goes up the other goes down. As the sound-waves travel through the universe at near instant speed the black and white spheres are separated from each other to different degrees or amounts and then brought back together along the two opposite waves. As the two opposite waves separate away from each other the grey spheres along their lines become a lighter or darker shade of grey the further they are separated as they are no longer completely cancelling each other. These spheres now exist in a medium grey universe as different visible shades of grey between black and white. The shade of grey for each sphere, or its positive or negative frequency, when it became visible or "came into existence" determined which subatomic particle it became from a quark to a lepton or a boson, etc. The degrees of separation of the positive and negative energies along the waves determined how much energy was no longer being cancelled out and the non-cancelled energy became different types of matter depending on the type and amount of energy available and the information contained within it. Also, as the two opposite waves travel and they separate and come together, all the waves adjacent to them are doing the same and as they all separate they need more room which causes an expansion to occur along with the sound-wave as it travels. The separation between the spheres creates the first space and thereby the first measurable (and the beginning of) time. Everything in the universe came into being almost instantly in their place and have been expanding outward ever since. Even complex objects, machines and sentient beings came into being instantly because these shockwaves were created by and guided by the original source code with an intelligent design. Unlike the big bang, all things didn't expand over time from the center to where they are now but instead were formed throughout the universe, pretty much in place, simultaneously and have been expanding apart ever since.

Out of all the things created, humans evolved to learn science and create their own machines and became a super advance, intelligent species. These advanced humans , and I'm not talking about us earthlings, but the original human race that evolved on another planet, had hundreds of thousands, if not millions of years to develop and had advanced in all fields of research to a point far beyond our current earthly comprehension. They had a space program and had spent thousands of years mining space with machines that hunted and captured asteroids and comets and others that cut up and mined planets for their resources. These mining endeavours and the machines to achieve them grew in size until they literally cut a large planet in half at its equator and hollowed each half out like two halves of a coconut shell. Billions of beings can live on or below this hollowed planets "inner" surface which has multiple levels or storeys beautifully carved into it, like we see at Petra, Jordan or the carved temples of India or other places around the world today, except more intricate, with gilded and bejeweled buildings and elaborate artistic displays everywhere. It also has unimaginably large storage vaults of endless supplies of anything and everything and lush gardens of every variety. While it is made from a hollowed stone planet it is a superiorly engineered machine with massive amounts of energy, huge crystal structures and devices of all types from electronic to biological and other. The humans that built it had designed it to travel through space gathering the resources to build life supporting planets like earth instead of hunting for and travelling vast distances to get to habitable planets.

These humans were so advanced that, not only could they cut up whole planets like butter, they had all possible DNA sequences mapped out so they could design and create any type of animal, plant or being from base elements. They had machines and robots from massive city-sized earthmovers to atomic scale miniature nanobots that gather individual atoms and base elements or simply gather and relay information. As awesome as all this sounds, it's their advancements in neural networking and computer programming that takes the cake. In their pursuit of building a computer they could upload their human consciousness into and store their essence, they not only succeeded in backwards engineering the human brain but they went beyond that and had also figured out and translated the original source code of the universe. They had tapped into God's mainframe and could actually communicate with God in his computer language, so to speak. This does not mean that humans were now all knowing or anywhere near being like God, but they were beyond extremely advanced all the same. All the humans of that time had their consciousness' or "souls" uploaded into a computer that used the original source code to create a virtual world in which they live and talk with God. A virtual heaven. It was God who told them to split and hollow out a planet and convert it into a cosmic, planet-birthing egg. The "egg" was fully automated and the original source code computer containing the human souls in virtual heaven, was placed in the egg and given full control over it. Millions of machines and even biological beings of many types were created to serve as a workforce. Bodies were created in which the humans in the computer could have copies of themselves downloaded into and they used these bodies to live in the egg and party it up like it's 1999. The egg was sent out to farm the galaxy for all the resources to build a planet . The two halves travelled through space like two open bowls collecting their grocery lists. Once they had collected all the needed ingredients the two halves met up, with their equators facing each other and they opened up and released their cargos into space. An electromagnetic sphere was created between the egg halves to counter the gravity from the egg and hold the items placed in it in place. The heavier items like iron were placed in it first followed by progressively lighter ingredients, in seven layers, with water covering the surface layer.

Our planet Earth was completely covered with water with no land on the surface when the two halves came together and lowered down over the north and south poles, enclosing the waterball of Earth inside it like the yoke in the egg. This blocked out all light from the sun and stars. With the Earth inside the egg, they now began their mission, to birth a living, breathing planet and reseed the human race. Stage 1 of this process involved turning on the lights. This was not a full spectrum of light like we get from the sun though, it was individual lights of specific type and color (more like heat lamps). Next they separated the area that received light from the area that didn't (separating the light from the darkness). Light was shone on the whole earth except for a band around the equator which was kept dark. This started stage 2 which caused the equator area to freeze solid all the way to the ocean floor and it became a solid firm ring (or firmament) around the planet that separated the waters above in the northern hemisphere from the waters below in the southern hemisphere.

Stage 3 required pumping the water from the southern hemisphere onto the frozen equator where it piled up as ice until the south had been drained and the dry land appeared. Huge machinery went to work mining and smelting the dirt and ores. The southern hemisphere became a fiery underworld pit of heavy machinery doing mining, digging and smelting on a scale that's hard to humanly imagine. Dirt was removed and transported to the northern hemisphere and stacked up to create one giant continent and seeds were planted for grass, plants and trees. Materials from the southern hemisphere are also taken outside the egg at this point and the construction of the moon begins in space.

Stage 4 involved setting up two grow lights. One brighter than the other to simulate the sun and moon. These are not the sun and moon though. They are specific colored lights, set up to grow plants while inside the egg and hidden from the sun. These were set in place in the northern hemisphere, in line with the sun and moon so they revolved around the earth in the same way the sun and moon do outside the egg. This created a day and night cycle of light and dark and simulated seasons so the plants will bud and produce more seeds to repeat the cycle.

Stage 5 introduced fish and birds now that they have plants and trees to house and feed them.

Stage 6 saw the creation of the animals and finally, man and woman

Stage 7 , humans are guided and taught about their planet and how to survive. They are shown the differences between the different plants and animals and what to eat or not eat.

Now that the earth, the animals and man and woman have been created, I'd like to point out some important differences between the Earth of then and the Earth of now. I've already mentioned that the Earth is encased inside another huge planet sized egg and the lights are grow lights, not the sun and moon. The egg ,or the heavens as we called it had multiple levels or storeys to it and had it's own gravity that was strong enough to pull up on the objects on the earth, making everything weigh much less then they do now. Basically, the strength of the gravity on Earth was about one fifth of what it is now or even weaker. From the time the egg or heavens first surrounded the waterball Earth, the weight of the water and the layers of dirt on top of each other was much less and with no sunlight having shone on any of the stone and dirt before being exposed as they drained the water and began to dig, all stone was soft like clay, or soft soapstone, and didn't harden till it was dried and exposed to sunlight. Even most ground up stone could be mixed like concrete and when dried with sunlight would harden solid. They had special full spectrum lamps which they used to harden stone once it had been shaped and placed. The atmosphere was regulated, with no impurities, for a perfect mix of oxygen and other elements to produce healthy lifespans and it never rained, there was just a mist that would rise from the ground as it dried. A lattice of rivers and canals were cut into the land to bring water from underground springs to areas that need it, like aquaducts. Clouds that did form wouldn't have the weight, due to the low gravity, to fall over the warm land and would drift to the equator ice ring and fall as snow as it entered the dark shade and cooled. The southern hemisphere below the frozen firmament at the equator was a hell-like smelting and mining/excavating construction zone while the northern hemisphere above the ice wall was the earth as they knew it. Anyone on the planet at that time would have described the earth as a flat circle. It has a convex curve to the land with the ocean and eventually an ice-wall surrounding it and the dome of the heavens or egg above it. Very much like today's flat earthers' model. The land down under,below the frozen equator, wasn't considered earth then, it was the pits of the Underworld. The Earth was like this for roughly a thousand years until the great flood which occurred when the egg or heavens separated and gave birth to the Earth into space and gave it its' spinning rotation of 24 hours per, before leaving to repeat the process elsewhere. Being exposed to space for the first time, the planet was flooded with sunlight and the ice began melting at an insane rate .The heavier clouds now began to dump rain. Water rushed in to fill the pit in the southern hemisphere and waves miles high pulsed over the Earth. The huge single continent broke up into pieces and sections were swept apart and slammed back together by the tidal waves, pushing up the mountains and grinding and crumbling the land into smaller dirt and sand that was deposited in layers all over the earth each time the sloshing tides came in and out. When the waters had finally settled the pieces of the original single continent had been spread apart to form our existing continents. Now exposed to space and the full spectrum of sunlight from the sun and a higher force of gravity, the first rains began falling, the first rainbows occurred and the rocks began hardening. All people and animals that lived, did so by being herded into 7 earthly boats or structures like Noah's ark around the world which in turn were (without their knowledge) sealed inside 7 larger heavenly flying vessels that took those people and creatures above the flood to survive till the waters calmed down (after Noah loaded and entered the ark, God shut them in and the ark was lifted above the earth. Genesis 7: 16-17). Side note: (While inside the egg, the Earth and egg rotated very slowly, about 1 rotation every thousand years, it's a gravity thing. The lights revolved every 24 hours instead)

Now that we've covered the creation of the Earth, the animals, man and woman, let's look at how it all went down for the humans after being created. God had ordered this world built for the humans to enjoy creation. He saw that humans had become great creators in their own right. To the point that they had gained eternal life and access to heaven, but the thing about heaven is, it is God's domain and he is a total dictator. He has to be. In heaven all things serve him. Humans don't have free will in heaven, they do God's will. God was proud of his human creation and what they had become. He considered them family. His royal descendents. He didn't want them to serve him. He wanted them to be served like royalty so he created this world just for them to rule.

There was one huge continent of land covering the northern hemisphere with a large empty void hole at the north pole area. Thousands of terraforming beings and machines were hard at work putting the finishing touches on the land. Humans were created and quickly grown to maturity in the underground levels of the egg or heaven. (this is where some creation stories get our origins as coming from underground. Heavens' underground levels would be it's upper levels from Earth's perspective. Up is down since the surfaces of Earth and Heaven face each other). Seven massive ships containing hydroponics labs with fully grown gardens were flown to seven separate Earth locations with a human couple placed in each. The garden of Eden of Genesis landed in what is now the middle east. Each couple, upon entering their garden, were told how they were created using the sacred DNA of their human ancestors who created this world as a paradise for them to enjoy as kings and queens and masters. A sort of all expenses paid permanent vacation. They were then told how they and the animals they were given weren't made for the world as it is but the world as it will be after a thousand year incubation period inside the egg when the earth will be birthed out into the solar system. Humans and the original animals are built smaller and stronger to live in the post-flood, sunlit, heavier gravity world and are to live in the gardens which have food and artificial sunlight specifically designed for them to live out the 1000 years while they, along with the plants and animals, reproduce in numbers to be a large enough population to survive being left alone on planet earth. The biological and mechanical terraforming workers were created for the pre-flood work with less gravity and they grew much bigger. They had completely different food grown specifically for their completely different DNA with their much bigger size, lack of sunlight and such. Under no circumstance were humans to eat food grown for the terraformers because it will literally change their DNA drastically as well as provide hormones that trigger parts of their brains to grow larger and alter their perception and thoughts. Their altered DNA will also react differently to sunlight and severely reduce their lifespans post-flood. All humans are from royal blood and are to rule the world like kings and queens. Kings and queens don't have rules, they make the rules. There is no right or wrong for a king or queen. A king or queen shouldn't feel guilt or jealousy, etc since everything is his or hers to do with as they please. Since the creator didn't want them to feel guilt and such, those emotion centers of the brain were either missing or turned off in humans and a lot of work went into building the Earth as a gift to humans not to have to work for but simply enjoy. The terraformer beings need guilt and jealousy, fear, etc as incentives to keep them working everyday. It's how they are kept in check. If humans eat the terraformers' food it will turn on those parts of the brain that are responsible for jealousy, guilt, shame, etc and will make them think and act like workers and servants instead of kings and queens.

I have to pause the human side of the story here and try to explain more about the terraformers or angels as we called them. When the egg first enclosed the waterball earth it went to work creating hundreds of thousands of different creatures to serve as the workforce. These beings were built for the sole purpose to be labour. They were designed to be very intelligent in order to perform their tasks. They were also created to live for thousands of years but with only one gender for each group to prohibit them from procreating. Because the egg rotates only once per thousand years in comparison to earth's 24 hour rotation now, each of the seven creation stages took place over one Heavenly day or 1000 Earth years. The seventh day, after everything had been created, was to be 1000 years of everything reproducing and establishing their place on Earth, getting a good root base or foundation growing before the Egg separates and leaves to go elsewhere. The separation and leaving of the Egg was planned to be non-violent, with no devastating flood. The ice wall separating the northern and southern hemispheres had flood gates built into it to slowly open up and allow the waters of the northern hemisphere to pour into and fill the dry southern hemisphere pit slowly. The ice wall firmament was to be melted slowly over a hundred or more years and the rotation of the Earth to a 24 hour cycle was to be slowly built up at a passive rate. Some of the terraforming "angels" however, because their work load was completed after the 6th stage of construction and they had nothing but time on their hands, began to get jealous of the humans and the paradise they were being given. They were not content to sit back and be mere "Watchers" for a thousand years as the humans are handed the keys to the planet, so they plotted to steal it for themselves. First they convinced the humans to eat the food designed for the angels. Not only did the humans fail to rule the angels but eating their food had changed the humans' and their childrens' DNA enough for the angels DNA to be compatible for inter-species reproduction. Using the human women, the male only angels could now impregnate the new human female DNA with their male angelic DNA to create offspring that were literal giants and then they stole the palaces built for humans and built themselves even more huge stone buildings and cities and declared themselves to be gods and kings. They used the knowledge and equipment given them to create the DNA for the original animals and began to make all sorts of abominations using their angelic giant DNA. They mixed half of one creature with half of another making mixed hybrid beings or they made creatures that were enormous (the dinosaurs, giant beasts, giant trees, etc) just because they could with such a low force of gravity and they wanted to see how big they could go. When news of this reached Heaven, the creator stepped in to try and fix the damage that had been done. The original fallen angels were imprisoned and the humans, who now had altered DNA, had defeated the purpose of living in the gardens which were built for their original DNA to keep its long life span and such and they had allowed themselves to be ruled instead of ruling so they were sent out into the Earth to live off the land as the workers they had become. The plans for heavenly day seven had now changed. Instead of slowly melting the ice and speeding up the Earth's rotation slowly over time before separating the egg and birthing the Earth, it will now happen very quickly during the birthing process and cause the violent flood which will wipe out all the angelic giants' bloodlines and the creatures they have made while the bloodlines of the humans will be saved to start over but since they chose to serve instead of rule then they will serve God from here on. A representative was taken from each of the seven human bloodlines years before the flood and they were individually taken up to the heavens and taught how everything will work after the flood with a 24 hour day, 12 months in a 365 1/4 day year, seasons, new stars, constellations and moon phases in a new sky, tidal forces, rain, etc. They were told to write this information down to pass on to their children so they know how the world works post flood. A sort of owner's manual for a new world. In Genesis, this representative was Enoch. After the flood, humans still had some giant DNA in them and they lived shorter lifespans from then on. . . . break time, more to come later.
